About the Authors

Mary E. Guy is Professor and MPA Director in the School of Public Affairs at the University of Colorado Denver. Her work focuses on the changing workforce, the difference that differentness makes, and the role of emotional labor in the delivery of public services. Her most recent book, Emotional Labor: Putting the Service in Public Service (co-authored with Meredith A. Newman and Sharon H. Mastracci), investigates emotional labor in public service jobs. It won the 2009 Best Book Awards from the Section on Public Administration Research and Theory and the Section on Personnel and Labor Relations, American Society for Public Administration. She is a Fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration and past President of the American Society for Public Administration. Prior to joining the School of Public Affairs, she held the Jerry Collins Eminent Scholar Chair at Florida State University.

Kristin Schumacher is a PhD candidate in the School of Public Affairs at the University of Colorado Denver. Kristin received her MSW from The University of Texas with a concentration in social welfare policy and administration and a BS in Communications and Gender Studies from Nebraska Wesleyan University. Her dissertation, titled Women in State Legislatures: Representation and the Policy Process, explores the impact gender has on public policy in the US States. Kristin's research interests also include the study of intersectionality in public policy and administration, social policy, and the social construction of target population in policy design and implementation.
